Orinaldo Gjergji, Data analyst and researcher at OBC Transeuropa/European Data Journalism Network

Over the last year and a half, internet speeds in Europe have increased by more than fifty percent. Unfortunately, the gap between urban and more rural areas, and between north European countries and those in the south-east, has also grown. After introducing the European Data Journalism Network, its tools, structure and resources for journalists, this session will explain how the investigation was conducted and how different data sources (both from EU and non-EU institutions) were used as a basis to analyse the phenomenon and guide the journalistic work.
